

I hope I have not bored you dwelling on laws, scientists or experiments. I just want to share my reflections with you. The ingenuity of men who lived so many years ago is extraordinary. They lived in a time when all the "distractors" we have today did not exist. I mean things like smartphones or television. Human mind was really busy and focused. Nowadays, on the contrary, we observe little, we think even less, because the solution for any doubt or the explanation of a particular phenomenon can be easily reached by clicking on our smartphones. I hope I have transmitted to you all the enthusiasm I feel for those brilliant minds.
